RICH MAN IS ESCAPED CONVICT

Samuel Jones, Widely Respected, Is T. B. Whitson, Who Killed Man 28 Years Ago.

Lexington, Ky., March 11.—T. B. Whitson has lived for 16 years the life of a respected citizen and active business man in Whitesburg, Detcher county. He has made a fortune and made many friends. Thursday he was put under arrest as an escaped convict, and will be sent to the North Carolina state prison at Raleigh to serve out the unexpired term of a sentence of 30 years for killing a man.

The killing was done 28 years ago. Whitson was then a young man. He lived with his wife in Bakersburg, N. C. He became enraged at certain conduct on the part of a neighbor, C. C. Byrd, which he considered a mortal insult. He and Byrd quarreled, and the latter was shot to death.

For 10 years the authorities failed to find Whitson, but he was found, tried and convicted in 1883. He escaped from the prison in February, 1893, and vanished.

It was about that time that he appeared in Detcher county. He went under the name of Samuel Jones, settled down to an industrious life and began to be very successful.

But with success and the lapse of years he became over-confident. He told certain of his intimates his real name, and his bank account was kept as that of T. B. Whitson.

When arrested, he expressed the belief that a former friend, now an enemy, had betrayed him.

At any rate, Chief of Detectives Malcolm Brown got information and made inquiries. He got a letter from the warden of the North Carolina prison, telling of Whitson's escape. Brown discovered that Whitson was about to pay a visit to Lexington and waited for him.

The man was calm when arrested. "I have expected it for a long time," he said. "I have been a fugitive from justice for the greater part of my life. Yes, I killed Byrd. I had cause to.

"But I don't think they will keep me in prison very long this time. I've been living right for a long time now."

Whitson's case is strikingly similar to that of Edgar Stripling, who was arrested at Danville, Va., a week or so ago on a charge of having escaped from the Georgia state prison in 1897. Stripling at the time of his arrest was chief of police at Danville and was living under the name of R. E. Morris. He had been sentenced to life imprisonment in the Georgia prison for killing a man.

ALL-ITALIAN MATCH

Was Won by Barre Candle Pin Bowlers Last Evening.

The all-Italian bowling team defeated a team composed entirely of Italians from Northfield in a match rolled on Buzzell's alleys last night by the narrow margin of 30 points. All three games were closely contested, and a large crowd of bowling enthusiasts was present. The visitors took the first game with 16 points to spare. The next two, however, went to the local rollers. Marotti and Catto were tied at 104 for the evening's highest individual score, but the former had the best record for the three strings. It is expected that a return match will be pulled off in Northfield next Wednesday night. The score:

Boston, March 11.—Three days before the failure of the brokerage firm of Sederquist, Barry & Company, Mr. Sederquist told Richard H. Reid of the ways and means committee of the New York consolidated stock exchange that the firm was solvent, according to the testimony of Mr. Reid at the Sederquist-Barry trial here yesterday.

Englishman Also Convinced of Occasional Communication with Departed.

London, March 11.—Sir Oliver Lodge, addressing the National Free Church council of Portsmouth Thursday on "Christian Revelation from the Scientific Point of View," declared that miracles were not more impossible than the interference of a human being would seem to a colony of ants or bees.

"I have become convinced," he added, "that an occasional communication across the chasm is possible."

POLITICS IN THE SENATE

The Presidential Bee Causes Complications

RECEPTIVE CANDIDATES

Wish to Avoid Entanglements—Will Not Help Democrats Select Chairman—Minority Leaders Move Against Penrose and Warren.

Washington, March 11.—Democratic leaders in the Senate who have been seeking a coalition with the Republican "insurgents" to prevent Senators Penrose and Warren from becoming chairmen respectively of the committees on finance and appropriations, said yesterday that they have not given up hope. They place their faith in five comparative newcomers in the Senate, but this time they expect no strength from those former arch-insurgents, Senators LaFollette and Cummins. For this change, the Democrats blame that active insert, the presidential bee.

Both LaFollette and Cummins are known to be receptive candidates for the Republican presidential administration, and they feel that to take a stand against the seniority rights of Penrose and Warren for the chairmanships would smack of irregularity and militate against them in the next Republican national convention. Senator Stone, chief among the Democrats advocating the arrangement, concedes that this is true, but feels that on tariff bills and questions in which are concerned what are popularly known as "the interests" enough progressives will vote with the Democrats to control the Senate. Could the Democrats break their deadlock in New York and Colorado by April 4, the Republicans would have a majority of only eight in the Senate and a change of five votes would control.

During the last week of the recent session, Senator Hale held numerous conferences with LaFollette and Cummins in an effort to discourage the plans against Penrose and Warren. A meeting was held last Sunday at the Washington residence of Mr. LaFollette to arrange a tentative program for the coming session. As Senators Cummins and Brown were absent, however, nothing definite was arranged.

On the question of withholding the chairmanships from Penrose and Warren, the Democrats, therefore, feel that they cannot count on the votes of Cummins and LaFollette. Senator Borah, another independent, of all the insurgents has been the least inclined to fling aside the restrictions of his party. Senators Clapp and Jones, who have at times left the reservation, have hardly the type of political courage necessary to oppose Penrose and Warren, who are very powerful with the majority of the Senate Republicans.

The house of the plotters lies in Bristol, Pa., where, Brown, Bourne and Gruma. Enough to accomplish the end desired. Of these, Bristol, Pa., Bourne and Gruma are particularly aggressive, and Brown faces the public sentiment of Nebraska, distinctly against the true Republicanism represented by Penrose and Warren.

WOULD CANNON GO?

Yes, if Champ Clark Would Enlist, Too, Says Uncle Joe.

Washington, March 11.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon called at the navy department yesterday and held a long conference with acting Secretary Winthrop. As he left Secretary Winthrop's office, inquirers asked Uncle Joe if he intended "to enlist for the war."

"I believe," he replied, "that I will challenge Champ Clark to join me in going to the front. He is larger and there is more of him to be shot at. It he will go, I will, too."

The speaker was reminded that Gen. Keifer had called at the White House several days ago to offer his services in case they were needed.

"Well, Keifer is a good fighter," commented "Uncle Joe."

Uncle Joe declined to discuss the report that he would not be a candidate for the minority leadership in the next Congress.

PRESIDENT TAFT GUEST OF ATLANTA

Addresses Business Men on "Greater Nation Through Greater South."

Atlanta, Ga., March 11.—President Taft was the guest of Atlanta yesterday. Last evening he addressed the southern commercial congress on "A Greater Nation Through a Greater South." The president arrived in this city at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning. A reception committee made up of prominent citizens of Atlanta met his train at Gainesville early yesterday morning and went with him to Atlanta. On his arrival here the 5th regiment, National Guard of Georgia, served as his official escort.

Mr. Taft attended the morning session of the commercial congress and later was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City club. After luncheon he and visiting state executives had a reception at the governor's mansion.

Yesterday afternoon the president delivered an address to the negroes of Atlanta at the Central Avenue Methodist church. After his address at the commercial congress last night, the president dined at the Piedmont Driving Club. At midnight the president left for Augusta, where he will take a rest before the reassembling of Congress.

INCOME TAX UP AGAIN.

Unprecedented Action by New Hampshire House; Bill Back to Senate.

Concord, N. H., March 11.—Unprecedented action has been taken by the New Hampshire House in putting in for a second time a bill which has been passed by that body and defeated in the Senate. The income tax bill went through the House with flying colors last week, but when it came to the Senate it was defeated 15 to 9, one member being absent. Since then two members are said to have stated that if they had a chance to vote again they would vote for the measure. Accordingly a resolve has been introduced in favor of the income tax, and it will pass the House and be put up to the Senate again, in the hope that others may be induced to join the two who have declared for the change, and that one more may be added to the list of states endorsing the proposition. Twelve more states are needed to adopt the proposition. If New Hampshire should pass the measure in the Senate next week, it would be very near adoption.

DYSPEPSIA ON THE DECLINE

Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets Cure Forty-nine Cases Out of Fifty.

Why anyone in Barre and East Barre should continue to suffer with indigestion, when a box of Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure it, is certainly a mystery. D. F. Davis and Frank Roark have been selling Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets for some time, and we know from actual experience right here in our own stores just what Seaver's Famous Dyspepsia Tablets will do, and if you inquire of the above druggists they will tell you they never knew a remedy to prove so decidedly beneficial in the treatment of indigestion, dyspepsia, palpitation, sleeplessness and other forms of stomach trouble.

It certainly ought to give you confidence when you know that every 50c box of Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets contains 20 days' treatment, and at the end of that time if you are not decidedly benefited all you need to do is to go back to the dealer and get your money. Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold right on their own merits. They cure indigestion simply by toning up the stomach and digestive organs so that the food will assimilate and give strength to the system just as nature intended. Seaver's Dyspepsia Tablets are such a good nerve tonic, too. Just try a box and see if it doesn't give you new energy, new ambition and new courage to carry out your plans and daily work. If it doesn't, your money back.

AGRICULTURE IN SCHOOLS

Feature of Discussion at Vermont School Conference

AS HELD IN BURLINGTON

Prof. L. J. Hills, Dean of the Department of Agriculture in State University, Gives the Chief Paper on the Subject.

Burlington, March 11.—The sixth conference of the schools of Vermont with the university of Vermont was brought to a close to-day with a discussion of the athletic side, the topics being "The True Aim of Athletics" by Prof. Frederick Tupper, jr., of the university, "Physical Training and Intramural Athletics in the Schools," by J. A. Macdonald, physical director at the university, and "Outdoor Sports and the Non-Athletic Boy," by James P. Taylor, associate principal of Vermont academy.

At yesterday's conference agriculture and home economics were the subjects taken up. Principal C. L. Green of Richford high school gave a paper on "Correlation of Garden Work, Nature Study and Book Study." Prof. M. B. Cummings of the university of Vermont on "The Point of View," followed by a symposium on "Agriculture, as Taught in the Schools," the speakers being Principal A. H. Merrill of Lyndon institute, Principal J. N. Barnes of the Vermont industrial school, Prof. G. P. Barnes of the university of Vermont, Principal R. E. Vaughan of the Mount Hermon school, Prof. R. M. Washburn of the university of Vermont and Prof. J. L. Hills, dean of agriculture in the university.

In outlining the course of instruction in agriculture at the Vermont industrial school, the superintendent, J. M. Barnes, spoke as follows: "We seek to develop the child's powers of observation, to show him that many of life's most beautiful things and wonderful truths are in evidence on every side; to present to him useful knowledge concerning agriculture and horticulture; and to attempt to convince him that an inviting business and home awaits him in that field."

The work commences in the first and second grades in the fall with weather and nature calendars, observation of changes in field, plants and animals; the winter work familiarizes him with the trees, birds and animals; and that given in the spring leads him to observe the development of seeds, birds and blossoms.

In the third and fourth grades, work starts in the fall with the study of blossoms, the value of the bee to the blossom, the history, nature, cultivation and value, both as food and trade commodity, of all vegetables, and the classes go to the fields and watch the handling of the soil and the planting and cultivation of crops.

The seventh and eighth grades review plants and plant life, later take up soils, drainage, methods of cultivation, rotation of crops and care of neat stock, horses, sheep, hogs and poultry; touching lastly upon commercial agriculture. Methods of demonstration employed are walks in the woods, fields and about the farms; care of garden, orchards and small fruits, sanitary milk production, making butter and testing milk in power creamery, also recording the cost of feeding and the value of products.

Prof. Hills also gave a paper on "Possibilities of Agricultural Teaching in Vermont Schools," in which he stated that this title may be interpreted in three ways: The pedagogical possibilities; the possibilities as reflected in improved farm practice; and, finally, the word itself implies doubt, is it possible to teach this subject? Taking up these three phases, the speaker said:—

(a) Obstacles. Both teachers and constituency are apt to be conservative and apathetic. Many teachers look askance, doubt its feasibility, its applicability. The farmer is apt, because he deems it impractically taught, to discredit it. Farmers rarely look with favors at the outset on academic effort primarily directed in their own interests. Poor schools with short terms if consolidated with lengthened terms become more effective. The disproportion of women teachers is an adverse factor, since usually women handle only the plant phase of this subject to advantage. Their lack of special training, and what might be termed for want of better phraseology, their feminine point of view, militates against their effectiveness.

(b) Limitations. The lack of an adequate supply of well-trained teachers; the popular misunderstanding as to the aims and purposes of the movement; the over-expectations of some of its more enthusiastic advocates; and the non-standardization of this line of work; all these are limiting factors. Teachers are lacking because of low salaries and because of the large demand for well-trained men in other lines of work. The misunderstanding as to aims leads many to criticize; the disappointment of those who expect too much leads them to discredit the results; and finally the vagueness of much of the teaching makes for failure.

(c) Equipment. There is no lack here. Every Vermont high school has at its doors all the equipment needed for good teaching of agriculture.

2. As to the possibilities as related to improved farm practice, one may point out the success of corn clubs and potato clubs in other states and the general improvement of agriculture as a result of the diffusion of the knowledge of why's and how's as indicated in other locations. The Windsor county corn clubs are certain to be harbingers of better agriculture all over Vermont.

3. For the speaker to imply doubt as to the ability of this line of teaching to make good in Vermont would be for him to stultify himself. That there will be much inefficient teaching done, much incorrect teaching; that there will be much to criticize goes without saying; but that constructive work is being done is certain.

If the speaker were a principal in a Vermont high school, he would:—

(a) Endeavor to secure a small appropriation from the town for agricultural teaching.

(b) Procure a young man to teach agriculture and to give science teaching an agricultural slant.

(c) Arrange with neighboring farmers for the use of their property for school purposes.

(d) Formulate courses in consultation with the agricultural college and departmental authorities.

(e) Use neighboring farms for demonstration purposes.

(f) Endeavor to make the school an agricultural social center for neighborhood meetings.

(g) Have faith, hope, charity, enthusiasm and the spirit of service.

In the home economics session, Prof. Bertha M. Terrill of the university of Vermont gave a paper on "Needs and Possibilities in Vermont." Miss Frances Stern of Massachusetts Institute of Technology on "Home Economics in Education," followed by a symposium on "Home Economics as Taught in Vermont," participated in by Mrs. Grace Dugan on the work in Burlington, Miss Cora F. Warren on the same in Rutland, Miss Stella Mott of the same in Castleton normal school and Miss Ella C. Pine on the work in Montpelier. The talks were followed by inspection of the equipment in home economics in the university and in Burlington high school.

STOLE TO SUPPORT PARENTS.

Begged for Postponement of Arrest Until Their Death.

New York, March 11.—Miss Susan G. McComber, a $10-a-week bookkeeper, 42 years old, who admits robbing John Lane Publishing company, her employers, of $9,000, and is charged with taking an undetermined amount ranging from $15,000 to $19,000, was sent to the Tombs yesterday afternoon in default of $5,000 bail. Miss McComber's pecuniations extended over a period of two years and were made solely, she says, for the purpose of maintaining her aged parents in a comfortable home.

Miss McComber begged for the postponement of her arrest until after the death of her parents. They were more than 70 years old, she said, and she did not want them to know of her disgrace. The request was denied but her plea that she be not arrested at home was granted.

"I could not give my father and mother the comforts they needed in their old age on my salary," Miss McComber told the court. "I told them that I was a high official of the company and made a good salary."
